THE STABBING OF GILHOOLY. THREE WOUNDS INFLICTED BY JOHN JONES, A BROTHER OF MORGAN JONES, WHILE SERVING A WRIT-CLAIM THAT GILHOOLY WAS MISTAKEN

FOR A BUEGLAR, About 8 o'clock on Saturday evening, Richard Gilhooly, a show-card maker, of No. 222 Bowery, was endeavoring to serve a Supreme Court writ upon John Jones, at No. 510 Pearl-st., when he recrived several severe stab wounds, from the effects of which he will probably dre. Gilbooly undertook the serving of the summons at the request of an acquaintance, and made several attempts on Friday and Saturday to serve it upon Jones, but without success. On Saturday evening he got into Jones's use on the representation that he desired to rent the basement. In a room in the basement he saw Jones, who is blind, a man named Bowman, and a voman. He stepped quickly across the room, stuck e writ inside the blind man's vest, and turned to eave the room, when the two men followed him. The door at the end of the hall was desed, and here Bowman and Jones caught him by the arms, and the latter stabbed him three times. He rushed back to the room he had just left, fastened the deer behind him, and cried "murder" at the tep of his voice. Officer Martin Cooper, of the Fourth Precinct, forced the outer door and entered Precinct, forced the outer door and entered through the hall, which was then shippery with blood, to his assistance. He was fainting from loss of blood, and Cooper carried hun to a drug store, and afterward removed him to the Chambers Street Hospital. Officer Amstrong, who entered with Cooper, found the bund man armed with an old cavalry sword, and had some difficulty in taking blue into custody. He said the officer had no business there without a warrant, and resisted him so long as lee was able. The sword and two knyes were taken possession of by the police, but none of them boar blood stains, and the instrument with which the weamds upon Gilnooiy were inflicted has not been found.

blood status, and the instrument with which the wounds upon Gilnooly were inflicted has not been found.

At the hospital Gilhooly was found to be suffering from a wound in the abdomen, penetrating the muscular tissues, but not to the abdominal cavity; a wound in the middle of the right thigh, one and a haif inches in length, penetrating to the base and severing an important vein, and in the right side of the breast a straight cut which had catered the lower lobe of the right lung. The last is thought to be very dangerous, and so precarious was the condition of the wounded man that at haifbast 1 on Sunday morning Coroner Ellinger was sent for to take his deposition.

After describing how he served the paper upon Jones, he states: "I then made for the door as quickly as I could. I heard a fellow of the name of 'Joe,' a body servant of Jones, call out, 'catch him.' I ran through the long, narrow hallway; the door was closed. I thought they did not recognize my position, it being dark. But 'Joe' caught hold of me and unioned my arms, and the old man got hold of one of my arms. Then he called for his pistoi and took something from his pocket and with his teeth he opened the class. I saw the but cod of the kinde and felt him sirike me, and I concluded to unioned the door. I held on to the door and cried 'nanctor.' They evidently wanted to finish me, and they pretended that they mistook me for a burgar. They asked where the other fellow was, so they knew it was I who served the summons.

Upon this statement Joseph Bowman was also arrested, and the two prisoners were yesterday morning brought up at the Tombs Police Court and fermally remanded. Jones is a brother of ex-Congressionan Morgan Jones, and is comparatively well off. He lost his sight when a boy through an explosion of gunpowder. He was in partnership with his brother, Evan, at No. 54 Centre-st., where the two carried on business as machinists for some years, but eventually the partnership was disselved and several law suits have been the result. It is said that the summons which was attempted to be served upon him by Gelbooly was at the suit of this brother. Bowman is forty years of age, and a wire-worser by trade, but of late he has done little exother. Bownian is forty years of ace, and a wire of acr by trade, but of late he has done little ex-pt to wait upon the blind man. GENERAL MCCLELLAN'S SICKNESS. A report reached this city on Friday that Governor McChillan had been suddenly seized with dangerous illness and lay at the point of death at his home on Orange Mountain, where he was attended by three physicians. Investigation proved this to be a mach exaggerated account of a painful but not serious attack. Governor McClellan, who has not before been confined to his home for a day since he had a fever in Washington eighteen years are, has suffered for two days past from a local trouble which was attended with sufficient pain for him to seek rehef from hypodermic injections of morphine. A gentlemm calling on him, and learning why be could not see him, reported him as dangerously ill, and his one paysician was multiplied to three, and alarming dispatches were pullshed in Newark and New-York. His physician said to a Trinting reporter has evening that there was nothing to warrant these statements, and that although Governor McClellan was somewhat exhausted by pain, he would soon be out. BURIED BENEATH FALLING WALLS. PALLING OF A HOUSE IN FOURTEENTH-ST. WHILE IN PROCESS OF REBUILDING-NARROW ESCAPE OF

The old brown-stone front house No. 10 East Fourteeath-st., occupied by Robert H. McCurdy since 1857, fell down on Saturday, burying four men in its ruins. The building had its eastern party wall in common with Herman D. Aldrich's house, No. 8. Both were to be changed into stores, but while Mr. Aldrich's house was torn down to the cellar, it was desired that the floors in the McCurdy mansion be kept intact, and to this end a system of shoring" and propping by heavy timbers was adopted to take the place of the party wall that was torn down. It would have been strong enough, perhaps, had it not been for the storing of bricks to be used in the construction of the new party wall on the weakened floors. These bricks were taken from an old wall running through the centre of the house, and were thus disposed of to save the labor of carrying them down and up again as required. Under the greatly increased weight one side of the structure settled and sauk, aided probably by a weakening of the underplanings in the cellar, where the operation of the masons at work laying the foundation for Mr. Aldrich's house undermined the basement sill-piece. The work on Mr. McCurdy's house was in charge of McGuire & Sloan, carpenters, of West Twenty eighth-st.; H. B. Weeks & Son, masons, of East One-hundred-and-fourth-st., and M. C. Merritt, architect, of No. 1.296 Broadway. A few minutes before the accident occurred Mr. Sloan, one of the chitect, of No. 1.296 Broadway. A few minutes be fore the accident occurred Mr. Slean, one of the carpenters, noticed that one of the floors had sunk several inches, and had gone away resolving to have the structure strengthened. Refore he had time to furn the corner the building fell.

The workmen in the McCurdy house had returned to their work at half-past 12, while the masons in the adjoining Addrich lot were yet eating their dimer, John Fisher and John W. Carroll, bricklayers, and Andrew Martin, age nineteen, an apprentice, were at work on the new party wall, which had reached a height of ten feet above the street. Robert Coffee, a hod-carrier, was near by. Near one of the entrances of the building was Michael McCornick, a mason, and in a rear door stood N. L. Weeks, of the firm of masons. A workman named Allen was in the third story. Suddenly a creaking sound and a swaying movement of the structure startied those within. Mr. Weeks spring out of his door; Allen partly sprang, partly was thrown from the third story to the sidewalk; in his descent a falling stone struck and hurt him slightly. Upon the others the four floors, with their weight of brick and timbers, fell. A deuse cloud of white dust enveloped the spot for a minute. When it rolled away the frightened masons from the Aldrich building, who had narrowly escaped, were joined by Michael McCornick, who limped painfully from the ruins, bruised, but not seriously hurt. Fourmen remained buried beneath the heap of shattered timbers and masonry.

Sergeant Schwink, with the reserves of the Fifteenth Precinct, entered upon the scene in a few uninties, and the fire engines from the district responded to an alarm sent out by the officer on post. All the hospitals sent ambulances, and the street was filted with people, whom the police with much trouble kept from ever-running the runs. The firemen of Hook and Ladder Companies Nos. 3 and 12 were put to work, and feeble cries from the dephils of the confused mass that reached to the bottom of the cellar answered their encouraging shouts to the imprisoned men. All were abye, Inspectors McGuinness and Dudley took charge of the search. In an hour carroll was found. He lay with one leg raised and the other stretched out, badly bruised, but conscious. At 3 octock John Fisher was taken out from under a pile of bricks and planks firmly westged between each other. Before this Martin, the boy, had been found, but to tree him from the timbers that heid him down firmly was the work of nearly three hours. Coffee, the last of the four, had been released an hour before. His head and shoulders were first uncovered. They were red with blood, and it was thought that he was dead. But he too, had escaped. His head arous him and supporting the mass pressing down from above, had saved him. His face and arms were broised, and his thigh appeared to be broken. He was taken to Believue Hospital. The Society for the Prevention of Crime contemplates the indictment of the proprietors of the newspapers advertising lottery schemes. A comparison between the advertisements now and as they appeared a week ago, shows a material change, so as to evade the penalty of the law. The law states that the advertisement of any lottery scheme or the publication of information where tackets can be procured is a misdemeanor. But the advertisement of the result of a lottery or of the drawing of a prize by a particular person is construed to be news and not in violation of the law.
